Dear Pastor Rick:

This year our church has seen an increase in baptisms as never before. To date seventeen people have submitted to believer's baptism and testified of their love for the Savior. The increased numbers reflect a growing attendance and also a growing maturity level among converts.

The goal of a missionary church-planter is not only to see a viable church established, but also to establish a platform for continued church-planting. In 2007 a visiting pastor challenged our leadership to raise the bar and find some kind of outreach that would export the DNA of our church. We have established the first leg of this effort via three-day festival we call Revofest. 800-900 young people were present over the three days of this inaugural event. Now we seek to challenge them to assume responsibility and leadership for the spiritual needs of their own community. We will offer conferences and regional mentoring groups for further resource those interested.

While executing this event, Christof, 19 years of age accepted Christ as his savior and has begun attending church. Although not primarily designed to be an evangelistic event, we desire for this to be a platform that will shape the destiny of many, many young people for years to come.

Our response level from this event indicates that we should expect 2000 young people in 2009. It will be a massive effort for us, but something our people are sacrificing to make happen. We do seek partners that will stand with us in prayer and even financially make this a viable event over the next three years. With the business model we have planned, the effort should be self-supporting in three years time. Would you consider partnering with us in this effort?

In His Service,

Keith and Debbie Gandy
